We Deliver!

The fastest growing segment for electronic payments today is the business-to-business market. Our industry has traditionally focused on businesses that sell to consumers, since credit and debit cards have historically been marketed primarily to consumers. However, large banks that serve the small business market are now offering business credit cards in place of their traditional lines of credit for small businesses. This in turn is creating demand for card acceptance among the next level of businesses above these in the supply chain, i.e., suppliers, wholesalers, distributors, and manufacturers. In fact, the issue of driving efficiency and reducing expense in both receivables and payables is one of the hottest discussion points among financial professionals in these supply chain businesses.

Remote Deposit

Accept your customer's paper check payments, then electronically process and deposit checks without having to go to your bank. Scan, process and deposit all types of paper items at your business location using a check scanner. Captured images and data are then transmitted for clearing and electronically deposited into your bank account. It's Simple. Everything is done in your business environment, no bank visits or deposit slips. All you need is internet access, one of our desktop scanners, and a personal computer. Run the checks through the scanner and watch each paper check convert into an electronic image, and automatically into an electronic deposit. This technology seamlessly captures and populates accurate check images and MICR data information into the data fields, alleviating manual data entry work for you.
